How We Will Calculate Your Balance: We use a method called "average daily balance (including new transactions)." See your Credit Card Agreement for more details.

Loss of Introductory APR: We may end your introductory APR and apply the standard APRs if you make a late payment.

Variable Rate Information: The index used to determine your variable APR is the Prime Rate shown in The Wall Street Journal on the 10th day of each calendar month (the "determination date"). If the determination date falls on a day The Wall Street Journal does not publish, the Prime Rate will be identified using the Prime Rate published on the last publishing day preceding the 10th day of the month. The Prime Rate will be effective for the entire billing cycle that ends in the second calendar month after the determination date. For example, if the determination date is January 10, the rate published on that date will be effective for the billing cycle that ends in March. The APR may increase or decrease each month if the Prime Rate changes. If the APR increases, you will pay a higher interest charge and may pay a higher Minimum Payment. If the Prime Rate is no longer published or is no longer available, we may select a similar index. The Prime Rate used to calculate these variable APR disclosures was 8.00% and valid as of September 19, 2024.

Annual Fee. The annual fee for the first year is waived.

Security Interest. In order to receive a Boost Card, you must open a savings account that will serve as collateral for your obligations under your Credit Card Agreement and deposit and maintain funds in that account in the amount we require.

No APR will exceed 18.00%. Your actual APRs will be provided to you in writing if your application is approved.
